LENS & LIGHT

ABOUT ME

Seven years ago, amidst the corridors of my school, I stumbled upon my first love: photography. But it wasn't the glossy studio lights or the staged poses that drew me in—it was the raw, unfiltered streets. Street photography became my lens to realities often overlooked—the bustling markets, the weathered faces, and the stories etched into every cobblestone. Through it, I glimpsed the actual scenario of those living hand to mouth—their resilience, their struggles, and their moments of quiet joy.

Beyond the frame, street photography isn't just about aesthetics; it's about empathy. Each pixel holds a narrative—a whispered conversation between subject and photographer.

So, join me on this visual journey. Let's freeze time together, not just for art's sake, but to honor the lives we encounter. Through the lens, we become witnesses—to joy, to pain, and to the everyday heroes navigating life's uneven sidewalks.

Remember, my camera isn't just a tool; it's a compass guiding me toward understanding and connection. ✨✨

VISUAL ECHOES...

In this heartwarming photograph taken two years ago, two boys stand amidst a sea of vibrant shapla flowers. Their faces are lit up with pure joy, their smiles wide and infectious. The lush green leaves and delicate pink petals of the shapla flowers create a picturesque backdrop, enhancing the boys' happiness. This moment, beautifully captured, reflects the innocence and carefree spirit of childhood. The boys' laughter seems almost audible, as if the photo itself is alive with their exuberance. This image is a testament to the simple yet profound joys found in nature and companionship.

RURAL TOUCH

In this serene photograph, a boy is seen cycling along a rural road, just moments before evening descends. The sky is painted with the soft hues of twilight, creating a tranquil backdrop. The boy's silhouette is gently illuminated by the fading light, capturing a moment of peaceful solitude. As the call for Allah echoes in the distance, the scene is imbued with a sense of spiritual calm and reflection. This image beautifully encapsulates the simplicity and quiet beauty of rural life, while also evoking a deeper connection to faith and the natural world.

In this evocative photograph, a street boy is captured joyfully bathing under the waterfall at Sohrawardy Uddan. His face radiates pure happiness, a stark contrast to the bustling, overcrowded city of Dhaka that surrounds him. This image poignantly highlights the lack of proper recreational spaces for children in the city. As Dhaka becomes increasingly dense and overpopulated, the need for safe and adequate areas where children can play and run freely becomes ever more pressing. Through this photo, you aim to shed light on the urgent necessity for better recreational management for the city's youth, advocating for spaces where their laughter and joy can flourish.
